Guide to Increase Church Giving for Pastors & Church Leaders

Why & How To Conduct an All-Church Generosity Initiative to Unleash Joyful Giving in Your Congregation

By Brian Kluth, Senior Pastor and Founder of www.MAXIMUMgenerosity.org

Teaching and calling people to live and give generously to God's work is a common theme throughout Scripture.

When a pastor and a congregation's leaders recognize the importance and the need to launch generosity initiatives or campaigns, they will find themselves on solid Biblical ground with spiritual leaders across the pages of Scriptures. A vision for teaching a congregation God's word on finances and generosity will lead to transformed lives, hearts, and pocketbooks for the glory of God and the benefit of others in our generation.

Even a simple review of Bible characters (Nehemiah, Malachi, Hezekiah, Haggai, Moses, Jesus, Paul, and Timothy) shows that God wants leaders to lead His people away from the quicksand of materialism, consumerism, greed, and idolatry to the high ground of living a generous life for the glory of God in their generation. So, when you decide to launch a generosity initiative in your church, you are joining a "Who's Who" list of godly spiritual leaders throughout the Scriptures and across the ages.

4 Reasons to Conduct a Generosity Initiative to Increase Your Congregation's Giving

When it comes to teaching on finances and generosity, for most churches this is the "silent subject" and when it comes to teaching on giving, some churches stop at nothing.

I often like to say that "no church has a money problem, they have a faithfulness problem." God has generously given financial blessings, resources, and provisions to his people, but they need to be taught, encouraged, and instructed to faithfully share the best of what God has given them.

Studies show that pastors feel unequipped and unprepared to effectively teach on money. Yet, every church somewhere has to tackle the constantly-under-the-surface question, "when and how are we going to effectively teach and encourage our people to be generous?"

Well, the first thing to realize is that a generosity initiative is not only on the "pastor's shoulders". An effective plan will be multifaceted and will include preaching, devotional readings, stories and testimonies, family/small group/classroom discussion, mailings, and more.

But before we go into detail about "what to do", let's take a look at "why" conduct a generosity initiative on an annual or regular basis.

Reason 1: A generosity initiative will Increase people's Biblical understanding

Living generously does NOT come naturally. We're all born selfish. The Bible teaches that we're to excel in the grace of giving. Grace is a supernatural work on God in people's hearts that move them from being self-centered to God-centered, from being greedy to being generous, and from being selfish to sharing. Scripture is filled with verses and insights on living generously for the kingdom of God in our generation. A few years ago, I wrote a Bible devotional booklet on a "40 Day Spiritual Journey to a More Generous Life" (www.GenerousLife.info) and identified over 400 scripture verses that can influence people's view on their finances, wealth, and generosity. A regular or annual approach to bringing some of these Scriptures to light will help transform hearts, lives, and pocketbooks.

Reason 2: A generosity initiative will help people rise above the pull of materialism and consumerism

People in our congregations are bombarded with billboards, TV commercials, mailings, radio ads, newspaper ads, magazine advertisements, and stores filled with thousands of products. This world screams at them in every way imaginable that only having more stuff or the latest-greatest stuff will make them more happy. And yet we know from 2 Tim 6:10 that "godliness with contentment is great gain". As a church specifically teaches their people about God's view on finances and generosity, they will help people slay the dragon of materialism that breathes down their necks every day. Teaching and encouraging people to be faithful and generous givers to God's work is the only antidote you can give them to living an unsatisfied materialistic lifestyle.

Reason 3: A generosity initiative will deepen people's commitment to the Lord and to your church

Matthew 6:21 tells us that "where your treasure is there your heart will be also." When you intentionally instruct and inspire people to be generous to the Lord and His work at your church, you are building stronger spiritual bonds in their life. If someone sits in a pew week after week, but does not learn to faithfully and generously give to the Lord's work at your church, their hearts are not with you. Even if someone volunteers a lot or even serves on your top leadership board, if they are not faithfully giving, their hearts are not with you! The sad reality is that in many churches, 25-40% and sometimes even 50% of those sitting in the pews/chairs most weeks have giving records that show zero dollars being given.

Reason 4: A generosity initiative will provide a format and forum to encourage greater generosity in people's lives

If done well, people will genuinely begin to truly get excited about giving to God's work. This will often lead to behind-the-scenes and/or up-front stories of God's provision and faithfulness to his people as they begin to faithfully give to the Lord. I heard of one missionary that had some tribal people who had begun to read their Bibles come up and ask him, "what does the word 'tithes' mean?" Since he thought they were too poor to give, he skirted the question for a number of months. But since they kept asking, he finally explained that the Bible teaches that Christian believers should faithfully and generously give at least 10% to the Lord from whatever he gives them. The tribal Christians began to put this into practice and began to experience God's help in their finances and daily provisions. Soon they were fully supporting their local church and church leaders. The missionary later confessed that as the "rich American" he was wrong in not teaching the people about giving to the Lord. By his silence, he was causing them to miss out on the joy of giving, the excitement of receiving, and the privilege of supporting God's work.

5 Ingredients to a Successful Generosity Initiative

Since we have now looked at the four reasons to conduct a generosity initiative on an annual or regular basis, let's take a look at the key ingredients in "how" to effectively proceed. Like a good tasting recipe, leaving out an important ingredient out can lead to leaving a bad taste in your mouth. So, here are important ingredients to cook up a great tasting and nourishing generosity initiatives.

Ingredient 1: Sermon message or series by the pastor or a guest speaker

One of God's greatest gifts in the church is the pulpit. Just as a rudder steers a sailing ship, so the pulpit steers the congregation. When a pastor realizes that a generosity message can be based on the authority, breadth and depth of God's word more than the needs of the church budget, there is great freedom and boldness in the message. But preaching with passion and conviction on generosity must follow the pastors own commitment to living a generous life. Learning to give faithfully and generously, even on what is sometimes a meager salary, will embolden a pastor's faith in God and his ability to creatively provide. It is from this heartfelt conviction from the truth of Scriptures and the tales of one's personal life, that a generosity message begins to take root and spring to life within a congregation.

I have also experienced that a guest speaker can be used to effectively help deliver a generosity message that deeply penetrates people's lives and transforms their giving attitudes and habits. Having done guest generosity preaching myself in many churches of all sizes in the United States and overseas, I have heard stories how people said I was able to say things and reach them in a way that their own pastor would have had a hard time doing.

Ingredient 2: Written communications and/or devotional reading materials mailed to the homes

I believe that if Biblical generosity teaching is to truly take root in people's heart and then spring to life in people's pocketbooks, it must be processed and discussed at home in the context of reading what the Bible says about generosity. While preaching can steer the ship, Bible devotional readings at home are the engines (or the winds) that will move people's stewardSHIP to new destinations. With this in mind, I put together a Bible devotional for my church (and for other churches to use) called, "40 Day Spiritual Journey to a More Generous Life" (www.GenerousLife.info). But whatever devotional material you may choose to use, should include clear Biblical teaching on generosity that is easy to read. If possible, the material should help people assess their giving to the Lord's work in light of their income sources, lifestyle choices, financial assets, and giving priorities.

The reason I say that generosity devotional and written materials are to be mailed to the homes is because many churches in an effort to "save money" will put materials on a back table and encourage people to pick them up after the worship service. But the reality is that a third of your people are gone on any given Sunday and half the people you tell to pick up materials in the back will either forget or will choose not to pick up anything to do with finances and giving. So, the best approach is to make sure you mail your generosity materials to every household. In the quietness of their own home, they can read and reflect on what is written without the issue of a pastor's preaching style and personality or the church budget getting in the way of the spiritual transformation that needs to take place in people's hearts.

Ingredient 3: Giving testimonies shared with the congregation

There is nothing like the power of a personal true story to get people's attention. Whether you use live up-front 2-4 minute giving testimonies of when and how God taught individuals to be faithful givers (i.e. individuals that give 10% or more of their income and special offerings to the Lord's work), or do a video interview clip you show in the service, or put people's quotes and stories in a pamphlet you mail out - - the use of testimonies dramatically touch people's hearts in a way that nothing else can. I remember in one church where a single mom got up in front of the congregation and told how she had a $24,000/year income, 3 young boys at home, was $24,000 in debt, but was led by the Lord to begin to faithfully give at least 10% of her income to the Lord's work even though it seemed insane to do so. She talked of God's faithfulness and his creative provisions in her life and how God eventually helped her completely get out of debt. She told the story with such joy and passion that it moved everyone listening to her. The thought was, "if she can willingly and faithfully give at least 10% in her circumstances, I need to trust God and do this too!"

One example of a giving testimony in a written pamphlet format is a pamphlet called, "Count Your Blessings" that tells the story of how my wife and I learned to joyfully and generously give to God's work in the early days of our marriage. In the pamphlet it talks about how the Lord motivated and enabled us to give $4000 to the Lord's work on a $15,000 salary.

Ingredient 4: Family, class, or small group discussions

In order to help people process what they are reading, listening to, and learning about, it is very helpful if you can give people discussion questions that help them process the material. Thought-provoking, memory-jogging, soul-stirring, and life-changing questions can help transform people from miserly tight fisted takers to joyful hilarious givers! As you review possible material to utilize in an all-church generosity initiative, make sure it has helpful questions in the materials, or write your own questions to help stir faith-filled discussions at home or church. It is in these smaller settings that so much can be shared and learned as people have heart to heart talks about such an important subject. In these smaller gatherings, a generous spirit can not only be taught but be caught from other in the group.

Ingredient 5: Commitment/Consecration Sunday(s) with response cards

If you are going to take people on a stewardSHIP journey, make sure you help them arrive in a safe harbor at their final destination. The final destination being a new mindset, a new desire, a new willingness, and a new plan to be more faithful and generous to the Lord's work. This often happens best when a church has a specific Sunday or Sundays when people turn in some type of response card that indicates their intended giving plans for the coming year. Some churches also give people opportunities on the card to indicate ways they will give their time/talent to specific ministries in the coming year. For many years while he was a pastor, John Maxwell, now a famous leadership author and speaker, conducted a four week preaching series every January on finances and generosity that culminated in people turning in cards that indicated: (1) I will start tithing this year. (2) I will continue to tithe this year. (3) I will increase my tithes and offerings to the church this year. For option 1, he gave people a 90 day offer. If they would begin tithing and within 90 days regretted this decision for any reason, they could contact the church office and the church would issue them a check for anything they gave by check during this 90 day period! While it may seem gimmicky to many people, this church was so committed to helping their congregation become faithful givers that they were even willing to back it up by having this type of policy in place. The truth is, that while faithful tithers do help a church's finances, the church's leadership realized that people's lives and finances are helped by God when they are faithful tithers and offering givers.

Helpful Resources

Now that we've consider the "why" and "how" to have a successful generosity initiative in your church, here is "where" you can turn for proven resources to unleash greater generosity in your church.

- ❖ www.MAXIMUMgenerosity.org: On my website you will find helpful downloadable generosity resources. Churches of all sizes across the country are beginning to use the Bible devotional booklet "A 40 Day Spiritual Journey to a More Generous Life" (www.GenerousLife.info) for all-church and small group/classes generosity initiatives. On this website you will also find pamphlets/flyers, helps for preaching on money/generosity, PowerPoint generosity slides, helpful articles, a free monthly generosity newsletter, and more in order to help you unleash greater giving in your church.
